YWCA offers job training workshop for youth

The Monterey Peninsula YWCA will offer a workshop for high school students seeking training and employment this summer, beginning at 9:30 a.m., Tuesday, June 18. Job hunting techniques and training in practical skills, such as gardening and office work, will be provided.

For details, students may speak with their school counselors or call or visit the YWCA headquarters, located on Webster Street and El Estero Street, Monterey. (649-0843.)

The opening workshop, focusing on preparation for meeting with prospective employers, will be conducted by Mrs. Elizabeth Graymatico of Pacific Telephone Company.

Belly dancing course begins

Instruction in Near Eastern dancing, or bellydancing, as it is sometimes called, is one of the popular activities currently offered by the YWCA. The course, which begins today, will meet throughout the summer under the direction of Lee Taiz (LAMIA.)

Classes for beginners will meet at 7 p.m. and for intermediate students at 8:30 p.m. at the Pacific Grove Art Center (gallery) at 568 Lighthouse Avenue, Pacific Grove. The fee for each series of six session will be $15 for YWCA members and $17.50 for non-members. Registration is required and can be made at the USO building, Webster Street and El Estero, Monterey. The new telephone number is 649-0843.

Information may also be obtained from the YWCA office on the continuing series of yoga classes, held Mondays, and on several other activities, including retreat times for mothers and "pamper days" at a Carmel Valley resort.

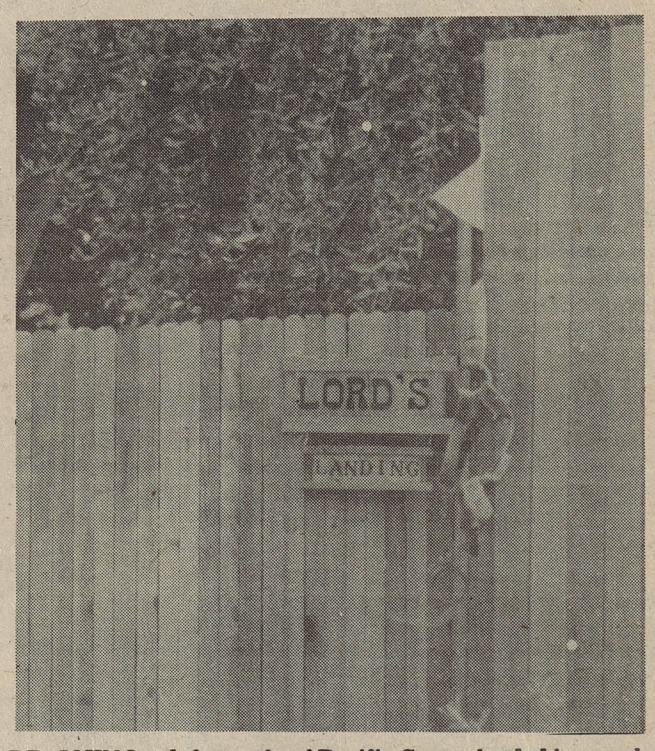
Old 'Stirrup Cup' seeks new name

The old Stirrup Cup won't be the old Stirrup Cup anymore. The Carmel Valley Village saloon will reopen this Saturday under the new ownership of the Carmel Valley Trading Company. A celebration from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. will be held at the bar, as yet unnamed.

The new owners invite those interested to submit suggestions immediately for a new name. Suggestions should be brought or mailed to the Buckeye Restaurant on Carmel Valley Road, where the originator of the name finally selected will be treated to a dinner for two.

The bar, which has been remodelled and enlarged, will accomodate approximately three times as many people as before for drinks only, (No food will be served.)

"We want all the old crowd back--except the gunslingers," said Mike Koocher, a co-owner of the saloon. The Stirrup Cup, which opened in the late 1940s, developed notoriety as well as character as the watering hole for cowboys who enjoyed an occasional brawls as well as spontaneous dancing and another round of drinks.



DR. JOHN Lord, formerly of Pacific Grove, landed in a park district ward already represented by John Sigourney when he moved into his Schulte home recently. Pictured above is the entrance to his new Valley home. Attorneys at the Monterey County Parks and Open Space District are currently investigating the legality of Lord's continuing on the board for the remaining five months of his term.

Schedule of public hearings

Board of Supervisors

House-numbering plan: At 2 p.m. on Tuesday, June 18, a public hearing will be held to discuss the concept of the five-digit house-numbering system now in effect in Monterey County.

Scenic Highway Element: At 10:30 a.m. on June 18, the Scenic Highway Element of the Monterey County General Plan will be reviewed in a public hearing. The 19-page document, prepared in accordance with state regulations and adopted by the planning commission on May 8, 1974, clearly identifies those roadways in Monterey County which have been designated as part of the state and county scenic highway system.

The meeting will be hold in the supervisors' chambers of the county courthouse in Salinas.

Planning Commission

Riverside Park: At 10:50, Wednesday, June 26, the planning commission will hold a public hearing on a new use permit application filed by Nicholas Neddelcove for additions to the existing permitted uses of Riverside Park Campgrounds in Carmel Valley. The new request involves an increase from the current limit of 20 trailer sites and 15 tent sites to a total of 55 campsites to be used interchangeably. An extension of the time limit for campers from the present two-week limit to one year has also been requested.

Zoning Administrator

Ford Rd. Gallery: At 1:30 p.m. on Thursday, June 27, the zoning administrator will make an environmental determination on a use permit request by James Trivitte for a metal sculpture gallery and studio to be located on the 11-acre site at 36 Ford Road, opposite Via Contenta.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor:

Words really cannot express our collective delight and appreciation for the striking photo of Kathryn and Gerri on last week's cover. "One picture is worth a thousand words," they say, and that cover and the accompanying news release will do more than anything I know to make the entire community aware of us and the year-around program we, as volunteers, provide for the youngsters of the Monterey Peninsula.

It is personally very gratifying, of course, to see two such fine examples of good sportsmanship and athletic achievement as Kathryn and Gerri get this sort of special recognition, for it is all too rare for those who are so dedicated and so deserving as those two, who came to us as such neophytes seven years ago!

And the Outlook's continuing interest in the Cypress Swim Club, as demonstrated by the consistently excellent coverage you give us, is most appreciated, for being "newsworthy" does make us feel that maybe all the hard work and the perennially dogged determination are all worth it after all. And we do have a great bunch of kids and tremendous "esprit de corps" throughout.

Again, genuine heartfelt thanks for everything!

Sanitary district given ultimatum on Odello purchase

THE DISPUTE between the Odello brothers, owners of the artichoke fields at the mouth of Carmel Valley being considered as a possible site for waste disposal by the Carmel Sanitary District, and members of the district board came to what board President Herman Schull called " an emergency" at the group's Monday meeting.

Monterey attorney Tom Hudson, representing the Odellos, criticized the testing procedures employed by the district to assess the feasibility of disposal facilities on the Odello land.

His principal objection was the delays that have occurred since the city drew up a contract with the Odellos in 1971 to undertake tests on the land, and the projected completion of those tests in mid-November, 1974.

"The testing procedures of your engineers are simply not acceptable to the Odellos," he said. "We have sat through meeting after meeting, with delay after delay. Now we have come to the point where you gentlemen are going to have one last chance, and you're going to have to decide whether you are going to buy this land or not."

Hudson told the board it had not lived up to several obligations contingent upon its contract with the Odellos.

"As a result of delays that have taken place," he said, "the Odellos are now demanding that those obligations be met."

Due to surveying activity underway on the Odello land, dikes and bird sanctuaries have been destroyed. These must be restored, Hudson said.

The critical "condition of contract" however, relates to a pipe which has been erected by the city across a lagoon on the Odello land. Hudson said the district originally was granted permission to install such a pipe underground and it is, at present, above ground.

Carmel attorney Shelburn Robison, counsel for the district, while agreeing generally with Hudson's argument that certain contractual obligations had not been lived up to by the district, questioned whether the pipe must be installed underground.

Following the meeting Robison said the Odellos would have to pursue the matter in court if they were going to force the district to undertake the costly operation of re-installing the pipe.

Members of the board maintained they could not make a final decision on purchase of the land until testing procedures by their engineers are completed. They did, however, respond to Hudson's specific demands regarding conditions of contract and his implication they would receive little cooperation from the Odellos in the future if more definite steps toward purchase are not taken.

Robison agreed to study the contract and determine exactly what conditions, from the board's point of view, had not been met.

David Kennedy, of Kennedy Engineers, who is in charge of the district's effluent disposal testing program, was asked whether his operation could be completed before the projected mid-November date. He said that process could be speeded up somewhat, but not a great deal.

THE BOARD decided to appropriate up to $1,500 for an appraisal of the property in question. Robison was appointed to solicit and hire a qualified appraiser.

Board member Donald Kirk presented a memo to the group, related to the Odello purchase issue but prepared before the statements by Hudson. In it he encouraged the board to "speed up the testing program, if possible, and vigorously pursue other necessary information while the testing continues."

He suggested four specific questions that should be investigated:

--"Given the effluent disposal capacity of the land, what is the value of the land to the district?"

--"If the Odellos and the district were to agree on a purchase price, what kind of terms would the Odellos desire?"

--"If the district were to purchase the property, would Pebble Beach be obligated to pay a share?"

--"An appraisal of the value of the eastern part of the Odello property." (The land being considered for purchase by the board is the western section of the Odello property.)

Members of the board agreed that investigation of these questions should be undertaken, but deferred action until the next meeting.

While pressure was increased on the board regarding the issue of the Odello land purchase, it was somewhat eased with regard to the proposed designation of the Carmel bay as an "area of Special Biological Significance." County Commissioner Charles Brensen, a member of the Regional Water Quality Control Board, made an unscheduled appearance before the Sanitary District Board and stated that it seemed unlikely at this point that the proposed designation would become a reality.

Water supply deemed adequate until 1981

By ROBERT MISKIMON

THE STATE Department of Water Resources says California-American Water Co. can supply adequate water to the Monterey Peninsula from the Carmel River aquifer until 1981.

Beyond that, additional water supplies over and above those available from the Carmel Valley ground water basin must be developed to provide for continued growth in the area, the department said this week in a report to the Monterey County Zone 11 Flood Control and Water Conservation District.

The findings were included in a $30,000 study by the State Department of Water Resources which was jointly funded by $15,000 from the county district and $15,000 from the state to determine the extent of available water resources on the Monterey Peninsula.

The study was launched to clear up conflicting claims about the extent of available water which were made during hearings before the State Public Utilities Commission in connection with an interim order by that agency prohibiting most new water connections by Cal-Am.

Testimony by a consultant to Cal-Am at previous Public Utilities Commission hearings indicated the cost of a proposed dam on the Carmel River, downstream from San Clemente Dam, would be some $40 million.

The study presented by the State Department of Water Resources appears to give Cal-Am a seven-year period in which to arrange for planning, financing, and construction of that dam.

Here are the conclusions presented in the state report:

--The ground water basin in Carmel Valley could provide a sustained annual yield of about 15,000 acre-feet if the basin water level is lowered an additional 10 feet.

--New well fields could be developed in the valley to accomplish the extended operation of the basin as water requirements increase.

--The California-American Water Co. can meet additional water requirements in its service area from ground water in Carmel Valley until approximately 1981.

--Concentrations of iron and manganese in water pumped from the Carmel Valley basin under extended operation would be equal to or greater than present concentrations, and new well fields may require treatment facilities.

--There is presently no known sea water intrusion in the Carmel Valley basin, but location and operation of new well fields must provide for a continued positive subsurface outflow to the ocean to avoid future sea water intrusion.

--Additional water supplies over and above that available from the Carmel Valley ground water basin must be developed to provide for the continued growth of the Zone 11 area.

Richard Meffley, senior engineer with the State Department of Water Resources, said the department's study was based primarily on available data, but certain additional geologic studies were made to more clearly identify the extent and nature of the ground water basin.

"It was concluded that the aquifer of the Carmel Valley is extremely porous and capable of rapid recharge," the study said. "It was also concluded that, if care is exercised to maintain a positive subsurface outflow at the mouth of the Carmel River to prevent sea water intrusion, the ground water basin can be operated over an extended depth to produce additional yield beyond that presently extracted and used within the service area of the California-American Water Co."

The study said the additional available water yields could meet near-term increases in water requirements, "but additional water supplies must be developed to serve future requirements of the area."

The study made three recommendations:

--That the near-term increase in water requirements of Zone 11 be supplied from the Carmel Valley ground water basin through extended operation of the basin.

--That Zone 11 officials and the management of Cal-Am give "early consideration" to the initiation of a comprehensive water supply study that would consider the area to be served, sources of supply, costs of providing service, and methods of financing.

--That further information-gathering activities be undertaken.

Under questioning from committee member William Gianelli of Pebble Beach, Meffley said the Department of Water Resources was of the opinion that water yield from surface sources could be increased from the present level of 7,400 acre-feet to 9,500 acre-feet.

MEFFLEY ALSO said the department's study indicates there is a supply of 13,000 acre-feet of ground water from the Carmel River aquifer available for domestic and municipal use, as compared with 4,500 acre-feet which were developed from that source in 1972.

"In effect, you're saying you show substantial additional amounts that should be developed from the ground water supplies of the Carmel River aquifer?" Gianelli quizzed Meffley, who agreed with his statement.

Referring to the figures on the extent of the Carmel River aquifer, Gianelli said "your figures seem to be considerably at variance with those from Cal-Am on ground water.

"This seems to lead to the conclusion there is enough additional water from ground water sources to last until 1981?" Gianelli asked, again eliciting a "yes" from Meffley.

"Based on estimates of the full natural flow of the Carmel River at San Clemente Dam site for the 50-year period 1923-24 through 1972-73," the report said, "the 1972 water year was considered a dry year.

"Pumping records of California-American and Del Monte Water companies, irrigation of golf courses and some agricultural crops, and use by individual well owners indicate that some 6,000 acre-feet of water was removed from the alluvium.

"The following year 1973 was a wet year (200 per cent of normal) and water levels completely recovered to their previous high levels. This indicates that, under present conditions of development, the 'safe' yield of the basin has not been exceeded."

Committee member Ed Lee of Carmel Valley questioned Meffley on the geologic model assumed by the State Department of Water Resources in determining the extent of the Carmel River aquifer.

"I'm skeptical that this first model is an accurate one for the valley," he said. "I suggest we make a seismic computation before we make a recommendation. I don't think we have enough information to accurately describe the river cross-section."

The committee also discussed and asked for more information in a final report, which is due to be presented by the state by June 30, on the extent and quality of water in the Ford Ord-Seaside area. Meffley said there is evidence which already indicates the water table in the Fort Ord area might be overpumped.

Under questioning from another committee member, Meffley said there is a possibility that more extensive pumping of the Carmel Valley water table could result in a lowering of the water so that some of the more shallow wells in Carmel Valley could run dry.

Meffley said it would be his estimate that more extensive use of the Carmel River ground water supplies would not endanger the willow trees along the banks of the river, since their roots would probably grow deeper to reach the water table.

Meffley also said the estimated seven-year adequacy of water supplies from existing ground water resources in the Carmel River aquifer is based on a projection of the past rate of new connections to Cal-Am customers of about 3 per cent per year. The projected demand for water in the year 1981 is 24,500 acre-feet, he said.

Supervisors deny appeal on Meharry development

By JOAN GREGORY

An appeal by the City of Carmel seeking to reverse the county zoning adminstrator's decision to grant a use permit for a 162-unit motel at the mouth of Carmel Valley was denied Tuesday by the board of supervisors by a vote of 3-2.

This was the second time the project, proposed by the Meharry development Co. came before the board on appeal from the zoning administrator's approval. Eight months ago, the board voted to grant the appeal, with Supervisors Warren Church, Roger Poyner and Willard Branson carrying the ayes over Arthur Ateridge and Ellis Tavernetti. Last Tuesday, Branson cast the deciding ballot denying the appeal.

The project, which involves convention facilities for 400 people and a two-story building designed to house ancillary shops and services, in addition to the motel, is to be situated on five acres on Rio Road, east of Highway 1.

The land is zoned R-3-D-B-4, a designation which specifically permits single family and duplex dwellings, and with a use permit allows hotels and motels, according to Zoning Administrator Robert Slimmon. The remaining six acres of the 11-acre development site could be used for additional motel units, not to exceed 87 units per acre, he said.

Carmel Mayor Bernard Anderson, speaking on behalf of the appellant, the City of Carmel, asserted that the project was "ill-conceived and premature."

"Until both the Hatton Canyon scenic highway and a dam to provide additional water supply for the Monterey Peninsula have become a reality, no development of the size of the Meharry development should be permitted in this area," he said.

Anderson said although the Public Utilities Commission interim order of May 30, 1973 did not apply to the project because of existing mains, the developers had stated that the project would consume 28,000 gallons of water per day, or 32 acre-feet per year, adding demands on an already marginal capacity."

Additional traffic would, he said, quoting the environmental impact report on the development, add 1800 vehicle-miles per day to local traffic. Anderson warned of the atmospheric inversion layer at the mouth of the valley, adding that the Carmel Valley air monitoring station recorded its highest oxidant content reading in the county during April.

The location of the project on a flood plain and on top of the Tularcitos fault, he stated, renders the entire concept of the project questionable.

Robert W. Tuttle, attorney for Donald Meharry of the Meharry Development Co., rebutted: "On the basis of the water report last night, it appears that we do have the resources, and there is no longer any reason to deny this development on the basis of water. Regarding the traffic situation, there is nothing new."

Tuttle presented evidence of commercial development projects approved during the last year by the City of Carmel, including 54 new apartment units and 48 motels, requiring a total of 259 off-street parking spaces.

"It does not take much imagination to appreciate the increase in traffic density and water usage brought about by such new construction. How can they (the City of Carmel) reconcile their approving these new commercial building permits over which they have direct control with their opposition to the Meharry project?" he asked, $$$tm no that the city was operating under a "double standard."

Supervisor Branson stated: "I'm going to have to bite the bullet on this one. But once zoning has been placed on the books, whether or not we'd like to go back to 1963 when rezoning was done), the property owners have a right to expect that they can develop their land in keeping with that zoning."

"The amelioration in the water situation is what changed my view," he stated following the meeting, referring to the previous evening's report by the State Department of Water Resources. The study, based on existing information on the supply and availabilty of water in the Monterey Peninsula concluded that there is enough water in the Carmel River aquifer to supply the Peninsula until 1981.

"The improvement in the traffic situation was another factor in my decision," he stated. Branson cited a decrease in the use of automobiles due to the energy problem, an increase in the sue of compacts and the likelihood that mass transit systems would be developed in this area.

Questioned as to what types of mass transit systems he envisioned, Branson replied that bus lines, such as the Monterey-Carmel Valley run recently begun, and possibly train service may be added to the transportation system.

"Convention bureaus," he added," Have been working to create package deals which would bring in visitors own cars."

President of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association spoke in favor of the appeal, claiming that the problem of traffic and water had gotten worse since the board denied the appeal last October. Brown asked the board for a moratorium on further development until Dec. 31 at which time the carrying capacity study on Carmel Valley, recently begun under the direction of Harold Chatland of the National Science Foundation, is scheduled for completion.

"I find that the CVPOA has made so many contradictions in the last two weeks, that I don't really understand where your organization stands," Branson commented,

Francis Herrick, president of the Carmel Citizens Committee added his group's support of the appeal. Herrick said the population in the area is leveling off, and if more space is given over to development than needed, the developers will be able to sell their land and leave, while the people of the area will have to live with the result of such mistakes.

Thomson J. Hudson of Point Lobos called for "intellectual honesty" on the part of the City of Carmel, stating that "because they can't find valid reasons (to oppose the Meharry project), they bring up floods, draughts, traffic and inversion layers. You forgot one--tidal waves," he said.

Hudson claimed that the City of Carmel "licked its chops" before the Crosby golf tournament and the Bach Festival, which attract crowds that "consume water, drive cars and affect the inversion layers."

AREA PLANNERS ADOPT PLAN

The area General Plan, "The Peninsula Tomorrow," last week became an official document of the Area Planning Commission when commissioners voted unanimously to adopt it, complete with a seven point addendum. For a cliff-hanging last moment it looked as though still another continuance might be in the making. A motion to continue was actually on the floor, but objections were met and the plan won approval. It now must go before the city councils of the six municipalities contained in it, as well as the County Planning Commission and ultimately the Board of Supervisors.

To a standing-room-only crowd in the Monterey Council chambers, Salinas attorney Myron Etienne introduced a newly formed non-profit corporation styled "The Monterey County Council for Conservation and Planning," which represents 65,000 acres of county land.

All members of the group hold more than 10 acres. He read a series of resolutions indicating the associations desire to participate in any planning for scenic conservation affecting the Monterey Peninsula and their own holdings and to help educate the public in ways of conservation and development of greenbelts and open space.

The addendum to the plan introduced by the commissioners contained several points intended to clarify areas of doubt raised by some of the large landholders at the last meeting of the commission on May 28.

The addenum also noted that some currently undeveloped agricultural areas shown in the plan as suitable for residential subdivisions should, of course, remain in their present state as long as their owners wish. At the same time lands now in agriculture and grazing where development is considered to be beyond the lifetime of the plan are not to be interpreted as restricted from subdivision except by zoning.

ENCHANTED GARDEN

The cars trickle in off Route 1, up from Big Sur or down from Monterey, San Jose, or even a place called San Francisco and head east on Carmel Valley Road and deeper into Carmel Valley.

Many tourists have placed it a short notch below the Garden of Eden, but always high on the list of peaceful, serene places. But traveling through once hardly does it justice: For the only real way to consume the beauty of this lovely place to gape at it, stare at it, and then you suddenly become aware that each time you see it there is a difference. It is almost as if some giant hand pushed a ridge here or cleared a vista there--one that wasn't anything to be seen before.

This is a different place. Different in that it is a hidden valley, tourists hardly know what to expect when they make that turn that takes them from the hub-bub of freeway traffic into an area of green grassy hillsides, wild flowers which grow abundantly along the roadsides, and contented cattle and horses that just roam openly and don't belong to animal farms.

People don't come to this valley in search of neon lights. If they do they are sadly disappointed. They have heard about this place, they have read about it, and now they come to give the valley the "once over."

STREET OF SARDINES

Novelist John Steinbeck captured the best mystique of Cannery Row in the often quoted opening lines of his book about this fabled stretch of California coastline and the simple people who lived, worked and dreamed among the great sardine canneries.

"Cannery Row is a poem, a stink, a grating noise, a quality of light, a tone, a habit, a dream," he wrote.

Today, the Row that Steinbeck knew is gone.

It disappeared with the sardines and left behind a twisting mile of rotting pilings and rusting steel. The cavernous packing plants-once filled with the sounds and smells of 250,000 tons of fish being canned a season, "and prosperity"--now stand alone and grey against the cold morning fogs, guarding the memories of a vanished era; a hundred years of history, drama and folklore.

Bustling now with unique handcraft, clothing and antique shops, art galleries and workshops--fascinating places where one can order a hand woven shawl and then see it made or sample a glass of wine and a bit of Monterey Jack cheese or order dinner at a posh waterside restaurant.

Senior Little League report

Senior League action continues this week despite Middle School and High School graduations, and a baseball awards banquet last Monday which involved many of those players in the Senior League who earned awards as outstanding frosh baseball players. On Tuesday, June 4, the Mets decimated the Padres 11-1 with winning pitching by Seth Bernstein. The Padres scored in the first and that was it as the Rotary Mets scored one in the first, four in the third, and six in the fifth to win.

On Wednesday, the Giants shut out the Lions 9-0 behind good pitching by Stan Lockwood and good defensive play by the Knights of Columbus Giants. The Lions completed a double play in their losing cause, Joel Spencer unassisted.

Friday the Rotary Mets defeated the Kiwanis Tigers 5-3. Paul Corona was held as losing pitcher, Kelly Ragan got the win. Saturday the Buckeye Padres defeated the Carmel Lions 12-6 behind the winning pitching of Sina Sotoodeh. The Knights of Columbus Giants battled the Dental Dodgers to an eighth inning tie with the K of C Giants. Score was 2-2 after the mandatory two hours play rule. In the final game of Saturday afternoon, the Athletics, sponsored by the Carmel Police Youth Athletic Association, defeated the Kiwanis Tigers 8-5. Mark Dodd doubled for the As.

Monday, the Rotary Mets stomped the Carmel Host Lions 13-5 with a double by Tim Sherman and a triple by Mike Scalise of the Mets while Joel Spencer tripled for the Lions.

UNDER THE OAKS & AMONG THE CACTI

By Mildred Hattan

269 students graduate from Middle School

The Carmel Middle School Class of '74 consisting of 269 eighth grade graduates entered the Middle School gymnasium Friday evening to the recorded processional of the Love Unlimited Orchestra.

Eighth grade class president Albert Tao led the standing room only audience in the salute to the flag. The invocation was given by Reverend James Brock of St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church.

Impressive and highly entertaining were the prepared speeches given by three outstanding class representatives. Belle Yang compared her early education in the Orient to present day schooling in the Carmel Unified School District in a talk entitled "School Appreciation." "Involvement" was the subject selected by James Irwin, who presented persuasive arguments for the need for everyone to contribute to a better school, community, country and world. Stopping the show was a hilarious "Seeing the Lighter Side" by Jess Taylor, who attempted to put the fad of streaking in its proper perspective.

Richard T. Wilsdon, a member of the CUSD school board had barely (forgive the pun) started awarding certificates to the graduates, assisted by principal Robert E. Whitehead, when two young streakers - a seventh grade girl and boy - made a successful sprint in one door and out the other, leaving a shaken administrator to mutter, "I think we've been struck!"

To the raucous ressional by Love Unlimited -- a disappointing break in traditional graduation music -- the class of '74 exited to the west court, where the stage band from Carmel High School entertained during a reception hosted by the seventh grade parents.

Valleyites at Silverado Concours d'Elegance

Mr. and Mrs. Talbot Kendall of Del Mesa Carmel in Carmel Valley and their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John Roson of Stockton, were houseguests of Mrs. Kendall's sister, Mrs. Mardel Glide, during the Concours d'Elegance, held recently at the Silverado Country Club in Napa. (Mrs. Glide divides her time between her Winters, Calif. ranch and her condominium at Silverado Country Club.)

The Kendalls and Rosons are all long time sponsors of the competitive antique and car display. The 1974 edition held special interest for Mrs. Kendall, who has long been a devoted member of Hill Branch, Children's Hospital Medical Center, this year's beneficiary.

Accompanying the Valleyites was their houseguest, Stanley Brunt, a noted Rolls-Royce precision engineer of London, England, who graciously agreed to be an honorary judge for the Rolls competition. Brunt has a prestigious establishment known throughout Great Britain for its flawless custom work on Rolls-Royces of all vintages. His clients include many of the Royal family -- even Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip.

Glide entertained 14 guests at cocktails and dinner at the country club the evening preceding the concours, which was followed by an open house at her condominium the next day with more than 100 guests dropping by for champagne and a buffet.

Before Brunt began his tour of the United States, Mrs. Glide and her family brought him to their cattle ranch at Winters, where he enjoyed an old Western styled luncheon.

Carmel Barracudas will hold 'Swim-a-thon'

The Carmel Barracuda Swim & Diving Team, their coaches, parents, and physical education health addicts of all ages will swim for fun, health, and a worthwhile cause on June 30, as the Barracudas conduct their second annual Swim-a-thon. The event is designed to raise money for their team and to support the swimmers' own International Swimming Hall of Fame in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. and the Foreign Travel Fund, which sends the champion swimmers abroad for Olympic training experience.

Approximately 150 Barracudas had a very successful season last year, winning the Tri-County Division II Championships in both swimming and diving. They are hoping to repeat this success in 1974 and got off to a roaring good start with their annual Kick-off Potluck Dinner, held June 2.

These swimming hall of fame swim-a-thons, being organized throughout the country, consist of hundreds of children (and adults) swimming as far as they can, with local neighbors, relatives, merchants and other civic-minded citizens putting up anywhere from a penny to $50 per 25-yard pool length that a participant swims.

If a little eight-year-old comes knocking on your door, remember he is going to do the work and you merely get your two cents worth -- per length. After the swim on June 30, the swimmer will be back to collect.

By national swim-a-thon rules, the swimmer is limited to 200 lengths or two hours in the water, whichever comes first. Seventy per cent of the money goes to his local cause (money to buy pool equipment, etc.); twenty per cent goes to support the International Travel Fund and the remaining five per cent to the charity or parent organization of the group running the swim-a-thon.

The International Swimming Hall of Fame is the first amateur hall of fame supported entirely through public subscription and the first "international" hall of fame since swimming became the number one U.S. international and Olympic sport. The Hall of Fame is a shrine that honors great swimmers of the past and promotes better swimming and water safety in the present and future.

Swim-a-thon is a national crusade stimulating swimming for health and safety, swimming being the greatest exercise there is, according to some medical doctors.

Anyone interested in more information or in being contacted by a representative of the team, please call 659-4246 or 659-2461.

Internationally known saint dies

Charlie Brown, Esq., the handsome Saint Bernard that gained international recognition when he was selected to pose for the postcard, sold throughout Europe, depicting a typical saint, died recently in Reno, Nev. The former monarch of the Carmel Valley Saint Bernard Farm drew visits from many tourists, appeared in countless parades, fairs, dog shows, magazine and newspaper aricles, and sired numerous puppies in his handsome image.

With the William Hancpols, the family owned by Charlie, (saints own families -- families do not own saints) he moved three years ago to Stateline, Nev., where he made an easy adjustment from the adoration of surfers to equal popularity among skiers. Born September 1, 1966; died May 20, 1974. "A good man, Charlie Brown."

Valley carrying capacity study begins

The carrying capacity study for Carmel Valley, to be conducted by a group of residents under the direction of Dr. Harold Chatland of the National Science Foundation, will be completed by December 31, 1974, participants were told during their first meeting, held Monday night at the Rancho Canada Country Club.

The group of 23 Valleyites launched the first stage of the study, dividing into subgroups to gather factual data already available on "essential elements" which affect and will be affected by the population level of the area.

The fact-finding units formed as follows to gather answers to specific questions formulated on the bases of the eventual needs of the scientists who will aid later in the process:

Air quality: G.B. Dalton, John Jernegan, Lois Moser, Diane Norrby;

Water supply and quality: Betty Davis, Dorothy Durham, Rod Holmgren, Howard Onstatt, John Sigourney;

Solid-liquid waste disposal: Bill Brown, Doyt Early, Connie Smith, Joyce Stevens;

Agricultural lands: Janice Elster, Vernon Head, Virginia Merz, Betty Wilson;

Open space parks: Nick Lombardo, Corky Matthews, Mary Jernegan, Kathy Wilson;

Transportation: Dolores Anderson, Bill Brown, Vernon Head;

Population characteristics: G.B. Dalton, Corky Matthews, Kenneth McGuiness, Lois Moser;

Energy availablity: Corky Matthews.

Other elements to be included, although no subgroups have yet formed to investigate them, are land capability and commercial-industrial -residential development. At the request of John Sigourney, Chatland agreed to enlist the aid of outside researchers in pursuing the latter element, to supplement to the work of the study group unit assigned to the task.

Chatland explained that data gathered by the groups, with the aid of the county planning department, supplemented by input from individual residents, will eventually be presented to the entire study group, who will "prioritize" and quantify each element. "Rather than speaking of 'air quality,' we will have to specify how many particles per million of various chemicals will be acceptable," he said.

The study group will then be asked to suggest different courses of action, the effects of which will be determined and presented to the group by the researchers from the Interdisciplinary Study Group (ISG) of the University of California, Davis, led by Kenneth Watt. "We'll have a chance to try out several options, and all the mistakes will be on paper," Chatland said.

For the purpose of data gathering, the group agreed to initially define the boundaries of Carmel Valley as between the ridges to the north and south, to the top of the drainage ridge on the east, and to the west side of Highway 1 on the east.

"You'll find that we can't live alone in Carmel Valley," Chatland forewarned. Many concerns, notably water, cannot be approached from the standpoint of the Valley alone, since they are woven into the affairs of neighboring areas, he said, indicating that the geographical limits of the study would eventually widen.

Of those participating in the first meeting, at least ten were members of the Sierra Club, four were from the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, two from the League of Woman Voters, two from the Carmel Area Coalition, two from the Audubon Society, and one from the Carmel Citizens Committee.

According to Chatland, diversity of interest among the participants is essential to the success of the groups effort. Following the meeting, Chatland expressed a desire to see a "better balance" within the group in future meetings.

A mixture of enthusiasm, scepticism and impatience, graced with good humor, characterized the mood at the study session. Standing at the end of a long, narrow table in a conference room at Rancho Canada, Chatland appeared relaxed, answering questions and expressions of apprehension, particularly toward the length and intensity of the effort required by participants, affably and with apparent confidence.

Participants were requested to come to the next meeting, scheduled Monday, June 17, with written statements describing specific characteristics of the Valley as they envision it to be ideally ten years from now.

EMERGENCY CALLS

First aid

June 9, 3:45 p.m.: Tom Thgue of Portola Valley and Steve Achelis of Los Altos were treated at the fire station for a medical emergency and released.

Fire calls

June 6, 4:58 p.m. : A grass fire at Esquiline Rd., started by a carelessly thrown lit cigarette was extinguished before the arrival of firemen.

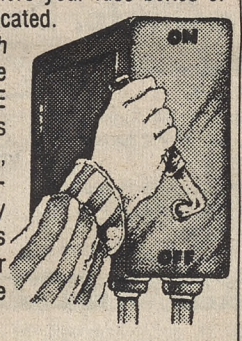
June 7, 3:32 p.m.: A service call was made to home of Dan Thorton of Country Club Drive. Firemen removed a gopher snake from the house.

June 10, 3:14 p.m.: A grass fire occurred at the Carmel Valley Little League Park on Paso Honda. The fire department assisted the division of forestry in extinguishing the fire, caused by children playing with rockets.

Put these tips and some spare fuses near your fuse box.

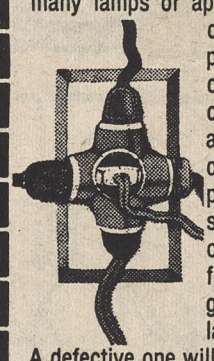
With a flashlight, they may help should your lights go out.

Be Prepared. Know where your fuse boxes or circuit breakers are located. Locate the main switch box—usually near the spot where the PG&E electric service wires connect to your house, or near your PG&E electric meter. Locate any additional box or boxes—usually in a closet or utility room. Keep spare fuses handy.



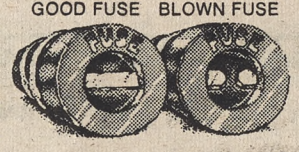
Check the Neighbors. If your lights should go out, check to see if other homes in your neighborhood have lights. If the power is off in your home only, you may have a blown fuse or tripped circuit breaker.

Determine the Cause. Blown fuses or tripped circuit breakers are often caused by having too many lamps or appliances connected to one outlet or circuit. Another possibility is a defective cord on a lamp or appliance. To check, unplug all lamps or appliances on the affected circuit, looking for defective plugs or cords while doing so. Replace the blown fuse or re-set the tripped circuit, following the procedures given below. Then plug each lamp or appliance back in. A defective one will cause the fuse to blow, or circuit breaker to trip, again.



To Replace a Fuse. First turn the main switch to "OFF." Make sure that your hands are dry and that you are standing on a dry surface. Look for the "blown" fuse; the "window" may be blackened, or there may be a visible gap in the fuse element. Replace the blown fuse with one of the proper amperage rating, usually one of not more than 15-20 amps. (Your electrician can tell you.) Never use a penny or other metal object to "bridge" the blown fuse, as this could cause a house fire. Turn the main switch to "ON." If only part of the lights in the house come on, this may indicate that a fuse in a secondary fuse box has also blown. Check these fuses in the same way you checked the fuses at the main switch. Be sure the main switch is "OFF" while you are changing fuses.

GOOD FUSE BLOWN FUSE



Cartridge Fuses. You won't be able to visually tell exactly which cartridge fuse is blown. In this case, test by replacing each fuse with a new one until you find the blown fuse. A tripped circuit breaker will probably be out of the "ON" position.

To Reset a Circuit Breaker. Move the affected circuit breaker handle all the way to the "OFF" position (for some circuit breakers, a moderate pressure in the "OFF" direction is necessary to cause them to reset). Then, move the handle to the "ON" position. If the affected circuit breaker does not indicate that it has tripped (its handle has not moved from the "ON" position), and you do not know which circuit breaker controls the affected circuit, try resetting all circuit breakers.

Some Added Safety Tips. Never plug in radios near bathtubs or basins. Never wash coffee pots or frying pans while they are still plugged in. Make sure that electric tools are properly grounded (with a 3-prong plug), or are of the U.L. approved "double-insulated" type. When you unplug an appliance, pull the plug—not the cord.

Still in the Dark? If you've followed all of these procedures and you're still in the dark, don't hesitate to call PG&E. We'll be happy to help.

School board endorses appointment of new administrator's for high school

The Carmel Unified School District board unanimously approved the appointment of a new principal and assistant principal for Carmel High School during their meeting Wednesday night.

Appointed as principal was Dan Stevenson, who received his master's degree from the University of Redlands in 1967. Stevenson has had extensive experience in high school administration as associate principal at Claremont High School in 1973-74, assistant principal, 1968-73 and dean of boys, 1967-68.

Dr. Martin Krovetz was appointed by the board to fill the assistant principalship. Awarded his Ph. D. from the University of North Carolina, Krovetz has served as chairman of the psychology department at Clairmont Men's College, assistant professor at California State University in Los Angeles and assistant professor at Clairmont Men's College.

The board also adopted the tentative budget for the school district. Included in the 1974-75 budget are funds for the renewal of the audio-visual services at a cost of $7,932. The budget also includes annual membership dues of $900 for the California School Boards Association.

Katherine Nicholson was appointed as district coordinator for the Volunteer Aide Program for the 1974-75 school year. Mrs. Nicholson will replace Mrs. Betty Bell, who resigned. Mrs. Nicholson has served as an instructional aide at the high school and has also served as a volunteer aide chairman for Woods School.

The board approved the school bus route schedule, and the routes are identical to last year's, according to board member Walter Hinton.

A visiting committee hired by the board to visit Washington State, reported on the 15-15-6 program. The committee returned recently from Washington State, where they reviewed an "incentive to learning" school. The committee reported that they had "negative attitudes" about the alternative programs at the school in Washinton, yet they felt that there "are definite possibilities" to develop such a program in the C.U.S.D. according to the committee.

Obituary

Lester Hannah

Word has been received of the death May 25 in the Veterans Hospital at La Jolla of Lester J. Hannah, former Carmel Valley resident and early advertising man.

His widow, Norma, was the Kentfield School District's first librarian, a position she held from 1961 to 1968. Shortly thereafter, the Hannahs moved to Rancho Bernardo in San Diego.

Les Hannah began his advertising career in the early 1920s, operating his own agency in Chicago and San Francisco. He also held positions with J. Walter Thompson, Milton Beal, Campbell Ewald, Blackman and Wallace Silversmiths. During his Marin residence he was associated with the E.D. Bullard Company of Sausalito.

At one time he was president of Hannah Laboratories, Inc., of Carmel Valley and gave his name to the widely distributed poison oak remedy known as "So Help Me Hannah."

His affiliations included memberships in the Lakeside Golf Club and Olympic Club in San Francisco and the Rancho Bernardo post of the Veterans of World War I.

Besides his wife he leaves one son, Jay, an artist of London, Connecticut.

The family prefers memorials to the Braille Institute of America, 741 North Vermont Avenue, Los Angeles.

A 'bridge-building' session with a short span

THERE WAS an encounter session of sorts at last Wednesday's meeting of the American Society of Military Engineers. About 25 members of the Sierra Club were present, a group which one engineer described diplomatically as "rather antagonistic toward us."

The meeting of the two groups, at the Naval Postgraduate School in Monterey, was arranged by Irwin T. Johnson, president of the engineers post and also a member of the Sierra Club, as a "bridge-building effort."

"I think that the engineers can show that they are just as conservation-minded as the Sierra Club," he said in preliminary comments to the meeting, "and in many cases more experienced and able to evaluate the effects of development."

Rud Crawford, chairman of the Ventana (Monterey County) Chapter of th Sierra Club, recognized the need for communication between the groups. "We spend too much time talking to ourselves," he said.

Keynote speeches from each group were preceeded by a presumably disarming "social hour," complete with dinner, drinks, a raffle, and a great deal of hand-shaking.

W.C. Lester of Pacific Gas and Electric briefed the meeting on projected needs for primary energy sources in generating electrical power.

When Rod Holmgren of the Sierra Club took the podium however, the meeting had come down to brass tacks. Holmgren had been directed to speak on the topic "Why we (the Sierra Club) don't like you (the Society of Military Engineers)."

He said he would prefer to speak on the public image of the Corps of Engineers in general.

"Many people have become convinced that the Corps has been responsible for the planned and programed destruction of our natural resources," he said.

Holmgren quotes a statement by Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas in which he labeled the Corps "public enemy number one." He went on to paraphrase Douglas' theme that the traditional function of the Corps, that of development of resources, was legitimate, but that their authority to dam rivers and destroy estuaries should be curtailed.

He said he is certain the policies of the Corps are changing to bring them more in line with raising environmental concern.

"Public attitudes are changing," he said, "and we in the Sierra Club are proud to think we have had something to do with those changes.

"Some of the traditional functions of the Corps remain vital," he continued. "We need flood control, sewage treatment plants, and other things. And any fair appraisal of the Corps at this time would have to take into account recent changes in policy."

Holmgren ended on a conciliatory tone. "The corps appears to me to be on the road to salvation," he said.

EUGENE HUGGINS, president of the San Francisco chapter of the Corps of Engineers, followed at the podium. His assigned topic corresponded to Holmgren's.

"The Corps of Engineers is one of the few agencies that attempts to attach the proper weight to environmental and economic considerations, and the well-being of people," he said.

"Some radical members of environmental agencies forget the interrelationships that exist between the economy, the environment, and the well-being of people," he said, adding parenthetically that he didn't include the Sierra Club in that appraisal.

"We must remember that man too is a part of the ecosystem, and that a strong economy is essential to all interests, including the Sierra Club's."

He said environmental agencies are often "single purpose agencies" and that the men who direct them are often "single minded men," again excluding the Sierra Club.

He predicted the uncompromising approach of many environmental groups would hinder national goals.

"We must be certain that in preserving the environment we do not perpetuate the ghetto," he said.

Huggins went on to tell the Sierra Club members that "what we need is more data and fewer opinions" in planning for future development.

"And the Corps is gathering data," he said.

He described a $2 million project currently being undertaken by the Corps to gather concrete data on the effects of industry and development in and around the San Francisco Bay.

He said in the past the Corps has only been able to gather engineering data, but the San Francisco project will attempt to put together data related to environmental and social concerns as well.

He also expressed a personal view that some actions of federal environmental agencies over the last decade had been nonproductive. As an example he referred to laws requiring the filing of environmental impact reports prior to land development.

"These reports," he said, "were intended to protect the environment and resources surrounding communities, but have become self-serving for the people in those communities. Any objection to development, even if it is not related to the environment, can be directed toward manipulation of that report."

"We have to re-examine national goals in this country," he said, "and redefine what we mean by 'quality of life.' One of the things that is going to result from a no-growth policy is that it will leave little opportunity for young people. We must bear that in mind."

He concluded by saying some people would prefer to see California return to an agrarian state "dependent on the munificence of Japanese tourism."

There was no discussion or debate following the two speeches, and it was not clear whether any "bridge building" had been accomplished between the two groups.

Chairman Johnson suggested the two groups might consider holding future joint meetings which would encourage discussion of issues, and received an inconclusively moderate degree of applause from the floor.

Volunteer Services luncheon honors supporters

The beautiful Rancho Canada made the ideal setting for the annual Monterey Peninsula Volunteer Services luncheon honoring the homeowners who graciously opened their homes and gardens to the public durng the M.P.V.S. House and Garden tour. The tour, which was held on May 8, produced a total of $6,864.24.

A check was presented to the president of the Visiting Nurses Association, Mrs. Edward P. Christensen by Mrs. Howard Healey, chairman of the tour. In accepting the check, Mrs. Christensen commented that it was 24 years ago that the Visiting Nurses Association was first established, financially supported by a check for $1,500 from the Monterey Peninsula Volunteer Services.

Without community support, the V.N.A. could not operate. Fifty-nine other agencies in the United States have had to close down for lack of it. This check for $6,864 will provide V.N.A. with 523 nursing visits and 1,711 homemaking visits.

As president of M.P.V.S. Mrs. Robert Robertson was a lovely hostess for the luncheon, and beauty was added by the beautiful yellow and white daisy decorations arranged by Mrs. Rosabelle Dresser.

Cal-Am seeks rate hike

The California-American Water Co. has asked the California Public Utilities Commission for a rate increase of 21.3 per cent in its Monterey Peninsula division.

"A uniform rate of return has been requested on the averaged depreciated rate base of each individual operating district, resulting in rate increase requests of various magnitudes in each," said district manager A.K. Fuller in a news release this week.

The Public Utilities Commission must schedule public hearings in all seven of the operating districts of Cal-Am throughout the state before consideration of when these hearings would be held.

Fuller said the "average customer" in the Monterey district using 8,250 gallons of water monthly would experience an additional charge of $1.37 monthly if the rate increase were approved, from $6.14 at present rates to $7.51.

If the rate increases are granted by the P.U.C., it would result in additional revenue to the Monterey district of $667,600 annually, Fuller estimated.

"The company is experiencing system-wide escalated costs for electric power, payroll and attendant taxes and benefits, postage and costs of materials, supplies and services," Fuller said.

He indicated the most pressing reason for requesting the rate increase, in addition to the others mentioned, is the need to have earnings sufficient to enable Cal-Am to continue to borrow money with the current interest rates.

"The money market is the biggest factor," Fuller said.

"The company's application cites an immediate compelling need for additional revenues to meet not only rapidly rising costs of operations, but to improve its financial position whereby it will have the ability to market securities for the financing of the replacements of facilities and the capital improvements required to continue to provide a high standard of service to its over 104,000 customers in the state.

"Only a small portion of the funds required for the installation of the facilities are available from operations, and the majority of the funds required must be acquired from the sale of securities, which can only be accomplished if earnings are adequate."

DISCOVER THE MONTEREY PENINSULA'S EXCITING WORLD OF DINING AND ENTERTAINMENT

Take a pastoral, panoramic view of the beautiful Carmel Valley and Santa Lucia mountains with glimpses of the sparkling Carmel river winding through the rolling greens of the golf course, then add a gracious, old-Spanish designed hacienda and you have the ideal setting for a peaceful, relaxed luncheon at Rancho Canada Golf Club.

The menu offers a wide variety of choices...from steaks to sandwiches, complete meals to salads or omelettes. Several Spanish gourmet dishes are also offered.

Long ago, this area of natural beauty was the Canada de la Segunda, a great, early California ranch comprising 4,366 acres. Today, due to the farsighted genius of golf professional Nick Lombardo, it is world known for its two 18-hole championship golf courses, complete tournament services and well-equipped club house.

Just a mile up Carmel Valley, but you'll have the feeling of being in another world. The authentic Spanish architecture and decor preserve and maintain the charm of our early California era. In keeping with this historical background, every Friday evening the "Rancho" prepares a sumptuous buffet of "Baron of Beef and King Crab." Truly fine dining! The buffet includes relishes, salads, vegetables and beverages.

Carl Miller, food and beverage director, is the charming host at the Rancho Canada. Nick Lombardo, managing his three successful businesses, relies on Carl and other efficient personnel to maintain the fine quality of cuisine and service.

Superb banquet facilities are available, from 10 to 400, for any occasion from a small luncheon meeting to a gourmet banquet.

"No matter how large the group," Nick says, "we serve a dinner with the care and amenities found only at the finest restaurants."

Having lunch or the Friday night buffet at the Rancho Canada is an experience you'll enjoy and remember.

'Woman Times Seven' at Tantamount

Shirley MacLaine plays seven contemporary Parisian women in seven comic episodes with seven partners in "Woman Times Seven," scheduled for showings at 8:40 p.m. this Friday and Saturday at the Tantamount.

The episodes are: "Funeral Procession," about a widow who is easily seduced by a friend of the family (Peter Sellers) in the cortege; "Amateur Night," portraying a woman who joins a band of park prostitutes after discovering that her husband (Rossano Brazzi) has been unfaithful; "Two Against One," about an unconventional interpreter at a Cybernetics Congress, who brings the Italian and Scottish delegates (Vittorio Gassman and Clinton Greyn) to her apartment for a very unusual evening; "The Super-Simone," about a mousey housewife who plays a fictional femme fatale; "At the Opera," about the rivalry between two women wearing the same dress; "The Suicides," depicting the bungled suicide attempt of two victims of a hopeless affair (MacLaine and Alan Arkin); and "Snow," in which a married woman is thrilled to discover that she is being followed by a handsome stranger (Michael Caine).

Recycling effort to begin

With all of the shortages today, recycling is quickly becoming a must--that is if we don't want to deplete all of the precious metals and ores that are the basis of small pleasures, like drinking from a clean bottle or aluminum can.

Isabel Pierce would like to start a recycling program in the Valley for those retired bottles and aluminum cans.

Mrs. Pierce will drive the material into the recycling plant in Monterey.

All those interested in contributing or assisting Mrs. Pierce can contact her at 659-4615.

Al Parker's illustrations 1930-1974

PARKER'S SERIES tracing the history of jazz, which was featured in the Fall, 1969 edition of Lithopinion magazine, included "Blues Singer." A jazz musician and enthusiast since youth, Parker has played informally with Benny Goodman and Buddy Rich. (Reprint with permission from Lithopinion magazine.)

An exhibit of illustrations created by Al Parker of Carmel Valley from 1930 to 1974 opened to the public at the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art on Saturday, June 8. Parker, one of America's foremost illustrators is also known for his advertising art work in magazines, newspapers, posters and other media.

The one-man show will include Parker's well-known series of "mother and daughter" covers for Ladies' Home Journal, several works from his portfolio on the American jazz movement, created for Lithopinion magazine, and Parker's impressions of the Monaco Grand Prix, commissioned by Sports Illustrated.

A founder and past faculty member of Famous Artists Schools, Westport, Conn., Parker has received many awards, including a gold medal from the Society of Illustrators in New York, which elected him to their Hall of Fame in 1965. He is also a Fellow of the International Institute of Arts and Letters in Zurich, Switzerland and has lectured throughout the United States and Canada.

Born and raised in St. Louis, Missouri, Parker studied at the St. Louis School of Fine Arts at Washington University. His enthusiasm for drawing, as well as his powerful and lifelong fascination with jazz, dates from early childhood. At about the same time he was learning to read, young Parker was illustrating the lyrics on the rolls of his mothers player piano.

It was with delight that at the age of 16, Parker found himself leading his own band and playing the saxaphone aboard the Mississippi riverboat "Cape Giradeau." Between sets, Parker industriously sketched passengers and occasionally exchanged glances with Louis Armstrong, who led a band on a rival entertainment line. Continuing his riverboat job for the next five summers, Parker earned his way through art school.

Following a brief and instructive stint with a leading advertising studio in St. Louis, Parker entered a cover contest sponsored by House Beautiful magazine and was awarded honorable mention and $250. This first cover created by Parker in 1930, (like all other works mentioned in this article) is on display at the upcoming exhibit at the Monterey Museum of Art.

Encouraged, he then drew three pencil sketches of young women and sent them to an agent in New York. These were instantly purchased by Ladies' Home Journal, and Parker's career as a national magazine cover artist was launched.

Parker's first book illustration came in 1933, when Women's Home Companion commissioned him to illustrate a love story entitled "He Always Fell in Love With His Nurse."

"I was so nervous, it took me all month to complete it," confessed Parker during a recent interview. "I still get nervous when I get a new assignment -- each one is so different," added Parker, who is known and admired for his innovative approach and breadth of artistic scope.

By this time, Evelyn Buchroader, who had been a fellow art student at Washington University and winner of a scholarship to the Art Students' League in New York, had become Mrs. Al Parker, relinquishing her scholarship and her own professional career to take on responsibilities as wife and mother.

Parker sold the first of his well-known "mother and daughter" cover series to Ladies' Home Journal in 1938. Revolutioning the style in commercial art, he depicted warmth and vitality of family in life in drawings which seemed to capture a cherished image of the times, and the covers soon became the trademark of both Parker and the Journal.

Other publications, including McCalls, Collier's, Good Housekeeping, and American Pictoral Review, regularly called upon Parker to illustrate their pages. Book and newspaper publishers joined in soliciting work from the versatile artist. Later, The Saturday Evening Post, Redbook, Cosmopolitan and T.V. Guide added their names to the list of well-known magazines illustrated by Parker.

KATHY BAKER of Carmel Valley posed for Parker with a pair of scissors hovering beside her pigtails, and an arresting close-up emerged for the cover of American Weekly.

The series on the Grand Prix in Monaco, commissioned by Sports Illustrated was warmly received not only by the magazine, but by Prince Rainier, who owns a portrait of himself at the races done by Parker.

Another keystone of the Parker career, well represented at the museum exhibit, is his series on the history of jazz, which appeared in the Fall 1969 issue of Lithopinion magazine. Reflecting empathy with fellow jazz artists, Parker created compelling and sensitive impressions of individual musicians. His images are powerful not only in conception but in diversity of approach.

In his Carmel Valley home, where he and his family settled in 1954, Parker continues to produce illustrations in a style which seems to change just ahead of the times. He is as willing today as in his art school days to try out a new technique or a change in style.

Until recently, Parker kept up his hobby of jazz. Among the many fine jazz artists who used to drop in occasionally to the Parker home for brief sessions were Buddy Rich and Benny Goodman. Parker continues to follow the local jazz scene and maintains an extensive record collection covering the entire jazz movement.

Currently working on illustrations for Boys' Life and Women's Day magazine, he is also involved with family enterprises. When Parker's son Kit, who runs "Kit Parker Films," a national film distributor, needed an illustrated catalog this spring, Parker produced a bold and modern design. When Parker's daughter, Susan, recently undertook the creation of a 30-second promotional film for Monterey Peninsula College, professional aid was close at hand and enthusiastically provided. "We all kind of like working as a family," says Parker with pride.

All of my assignments are new to me -- are a challenge. It's really fun to do graphics,'" Parker says. If the reflection on a life-time profession pursued with tireless effort, often involving 12 to 18 hours each day, sounds a bit lighthearted, perhaps that is because it's the nature of the man.

PARKER'S mother-daughter series, which appeared on the cover of Ladies' Home Journal from 1939 to 1951, became a trademark for both Parker and the Journal.

"UP THE RIVER" was the title of Parker's impression of "King Oliver," one of the fathers of jazz and a teacher of Louis Armstrong, whom Parker saw frequently during his teens, when both played in bands aboard rival riverboat lines.

PARKER'S COVER series for Lithopinion magazine was prepared as part of an effort to explore the possibility of using artwork as a replacement for photographs, which have dominated magazine and newspaper covers in recent years. (Reprinted with permission from Lithopinion magazine.)

IN DESIGNING illustrations for playwright Arthur Miller's first children's book, "Jane's Blanket," Parker had the five girls in the Dede Gregory family of Carmel Valley pose for Jane at Different ages.

Fabric creations by Sue Williams on display

A collection of fabric wall hangings by Carmel Valley artist Sue Williams opened Sunday in "the back room" of the Village House in Carmel Valley. The exhibit will be open to the public through July 1 during regular store hours, 9 a.m. - 6 p.m. Mondays through Saturdays.

The series of three-dimensional, quilted, fabric compositions were created through use of several techniques, including batik, direct dye application, stencilling, block printing and quilting, the artist explained.

Working with cloth in three dimensions, she said, brings out shapes and colors as well as providing a soft tactile quality. This latter characteristic is evidenced clearly in the earliest of her works on exhibit, "Peach," a soft, pink-orange composition of stuffed brush denim.

A teacher of home economics at Carmel High School, Ms. Williams was prompted to create "Ewe," a fish-eye portrait of the animal, as a tribute to the ewe owned by one of her students who is a 4-H club member.

"Flemings," an impressionistic landscape depicting sunset on the Hawaiian island of Maui, which she visited this spring, is the most recent of her exhibited works, which she plans to quilt. Brilliant and subdues colors fuse lyrically in this design done on a 70-inch stretch of linen.

Ms. Williams studied fabric design at the University of California Davis, and then operated her own studio in San Fransisco, where she created original fabrics and clothing. She established a silk screen department for Alvin Duskin's of San Francisco shortly thereafter.

For the past four years, Ms. Williams has taught home economics at Carmel High School. She also maintains a studio at the Whole Earth Crafts Center on Cannery Row, Monterey.

Ms. Williams' work has been exhibited at several museums and institutions throughout California, including the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art (1974), U.C., Davis Art Center (1970), the Squaw Valley Fashion Show, which included original fabric and clothing designs (1969), and the All-University All-Arts Festival at U.C., Riverside (1966). Ms. Williams Williams was awarded honorable mention in the first annual Fiber Show held at Fort Ord this year.

By LUCY SMITHSON

I'VE FINALLY grown up enough to admit it. I'll never be an Olympic level rider.

Why didn't I realize this before? Well, I'm only human. I have an optimist's view of future possibilities, and , like everyone else, a healthy blind spot as to my shortcomings. I really didn't consider it a handicap to be 20 years over-age and 30 pounds overweight. I intended to surmount the problems caused by my lack of depth perception and my unmusical lack of sense of timing. Surely being uncoordinated could be overcome by being truly and sincerely keen.

I practiced very hard, and, for a long time, I didn't get older--I got better (a very little bit.) After many riding lessons a friend commented on my year's progress: I didn't crash and bang around the way I used to.

But age and condition catch up with a person. If'n de arthritis don't git you de hemmorhoids do. Some days you wake up feeling fragile and somehow breakable. Other days you're just plain broken down.

I finally reduced my ambitions to becoming just a capable rider. Then I set my sights on just setting to the point where I am fair to my horse. (That may be the highest standard of all, but is more attainable.) Anyday now, I'll turn into a white-haired old lady, driving about in a surrey with a lap robe over my knees. What's wrong with this picture? It's just that almost no one in California drives a horse in harness. With California, it's all or nothing. You either ride horses or bet on them. There's no middle ground.

I'm some kind of heretic because I've hitched a lot of horses in other parts of the world. I've spread spidery harnessess over Standardbreds and snuggled up to their rears, with my feet higher than my seat, and the same kind of view that fullback Larry Czonka has of quarterback Bob Griese.

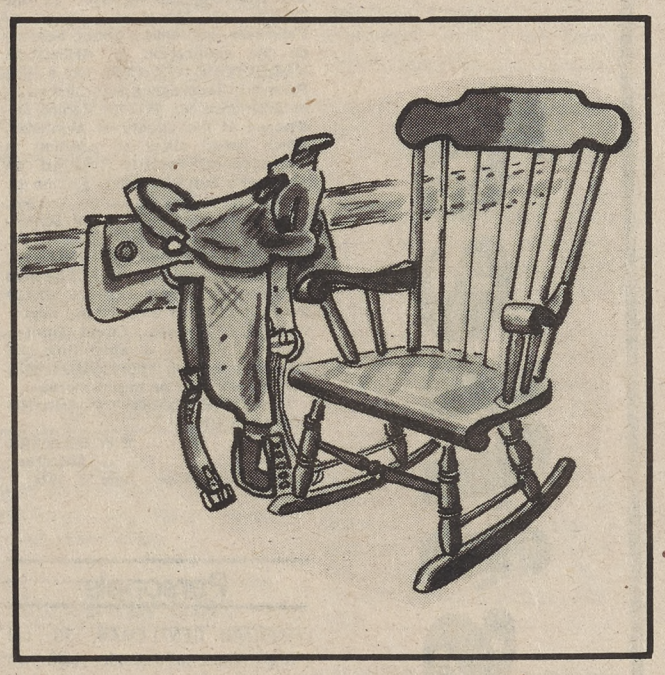
I used to spend a lot of time (before I got smart) driving young soon-to-be-gaited Saddlebreds. Well, you dont't really drive Saddlebreds. You sort of hold them together so they don't go "spro-oing" in all directions.

Starting from scratch, I've taught three-and-a-half horses, two ponies and a donkey to drive to various vehicles. In doing so, I or my fourlegged friends have smashed a surrey, a sleigh, and, most recently, a ponycart. That makes me the local expert on harnessing horses.

If you want to become a smashing success in driving horses, or if you just want to hitch your favorite riding horse in order to drive past the gas station, this is how you start.

First you find a horse that longes quietly and well. If a horse goes well on a longe line, in his own mind he's being driven. He will probably not mind long reins and signals from the read. All he has to get used to is draggin' the wagon.

Hotbloods are really the Jaguars of driving horses-quick, light, responsive. However, I, personally, would not want to drive all that responsiveness on Carmel Valley roads. Leave



THERE'S NO middle ground.

"Hot Flashes" in the barn and hitch "Ol' Eight Cents A Pound" instead.

NOW SPREAD out all the straps and lines of the harness and figure out what goes where. That padded part with the rings goes right where the saddle goes, and fastens on with a bellyband that has lots of straps hanging down. Fastened to the center of the "saddle" is a strap attached to a padded loop for the horse's tail. This crupper centers the britching, which goes around the horse's rear and fastens to the shafts of the vehicle to prevent the cart or whatever from running forward into the horse. Yipes, antlers in the treetops!

The breast collar goes around the horse's shoulders, and those two long heavy straps, the traces, fasten to a wobble-stick, called a singletree, on the cart. Don't fasten any part of the harness to the cart at first.

Most horses have no objection to wearing a harness. They do object, however, to having the cart approach their rear, and they object dreadfully to having shafts on either side of them. What a horse in this predicament usually wants to do is to turn around quickly and study the situation. The shafts won't let him turn. If he succeeds in turning anyhow, something's got to give. And you just might be the one in trouble.

It does no harm to have a lot of helper at this point. Get all those watchers off the fence. (You are inside a fenced area, aren't you?) Well, do this in an arena or treeless pasture. We don't take harness horses on the road until they've had weeks of training under their bellyband.

The helpers can hold the shafts and move the cart. You lead the horse and don't let him spurt ahead. The kids can bring along the shafts and cart as if the horse were hitched. It's not the cart following the horse that's so terrifying--it's being unable to turn.

Fifteen minutes a day of this for several days will wear everyone out. A worn out horse will get the idea that he has to go straight ahead or around in big circles.

Then you can fasten just the shafts loosely through the loops provided for them, the tugs. When this proves agreeable to the horse, you can fasten traces and the tiedowns to the bellyband and the britching. But don't let the helpers go home and yet.

Old-timers used to hitch a new horse beside an experienced one in a double harness. Us beginners have enough trouble with just one horse. It does not help to have someone ride a quiet horse alongside--that just confuses the issue.

After pulling the empty cart around for a day or two, you can have someone sit in it while you continue leading. The extra weight and the fact that people are behind him will not bother the horse. The jiggling on shafts and harness as people get in and out may, so practice that.

Finally you can install a driver in the cart. Leave a leader at the horse's head for safety's sake. A wishy-washy person like myself takes about ten days to get to this point. A real expert, like Ray Hackworth, can have a horse driving much more quickly. But we agree that the next step is to go out and put miles on the odometer.

Do the shopping, go to the library, visit friends--the further the better. A horse that's only driven once in a while before he's fully trained will always be an iffy proposition. The horse that's fully trained before he's allowed any days off will be safe for little old white haired ladies. (Like me.)

MISS CARMEL Valley Trail & Saddle Club for 1974, Regina Marie Halle, stands proudly with her quarterhorse "Merry-Go-Round," which she trained herself. Miss Halle will reoresent the Valley in the annual Sweetheart Contest of the state rodeo in Salinas July 18 through 21. (Photo by Jack Savage.)

Regina Halle to represent Valley at state rodeo

Regina Marie Halle, blonde and blue-eyed daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arne F. Halle, will represent the Carmel Valley in the annual Sweetheart Contest of the California Rodeo at Salinas July 18 through 21. She is entered under the sponsorship of the Carmel Valley Trail and Saddle Club.

From her earliest years, Miss Halle has shown great enthusiasm for the equestrian art and for horseshow competition. Her first lesson came when she was a member of the Pebble Beach Pony Club. Soon after an Austrian friend who rode with the Spanish riding school introduced her to jumping and use of dressage principles.

Learning to ride Western was the next step. Her sister took her as far as she could. Miss Halle took it from there and continued to advance by observing other riders.

Miss Halle learned to train horses soon after buying one that was only green broke, rather than what she refers to as "an expensive, push button" horse.

Miss Halle has shown as far north as Santa Rosa, where she was entered in the championship horse show of the California State Horsemen's Association. Although there were more than two thousand entries she placed in two events.

She has been a member of the Carmel Valley Trail and Saddle Club for seven years, the American Horse Shows Association for six years and was given an annual membership in Region Six and the National Steeplechase and Hunt Association.

This summer she plans to work at Santa Anita Race Track for a month. In the fall, she will attend Monterey Peninsula College and later hopes to further her education in horse related subjects at San Luis Obispo.

Junior Golf Tourney next week

The annual Peter Hay Junior Golf Tournament, open to all boys of the Monterey Peninsula between the ages of 12 and 18, will be held June 17 thru 20 at the Pebble Beach Golf course.

The Juniors must be 12 years of age by June 17 and not have reached their eighteenth birthday by the first day of play. Their residence must be located between Marina and Big Sur, and west of Los Laureles Grade.

Started by the late Peter Hay when he was the pro at the old Del Monte golf course in 1938, this championship moved to Pebble Beach in 1943. This was the year that Peter Hay, who loved working with youngsters, became the well-known golf pro of the Pebble Beach Golf Links.

Qualifying rounds start June 17 at 6 a.m., with match play to be held June 18, 19 and 20.

The tournament is limited to the first 100 entries, and those interested in competing should contact Ray Parga at the Pebble Pro Shop, 624-0663. Ray has been primarily responsible for continuing this event in recent years.

Del Monte Properties Company donates the use of the course for these teenage golfers, and the trophies are given by the Monterey Rotary Club.

RSVP invites applicants for residential care program

Applications are now being accepted for tenancy at RSVP's residential complex for the adult physically impaired. RSVP Administrator Mrs. Elaine Castro said that construction on the $2.1 million project is well under way and, if present progress continues, the buildings will be ready for occupancy late this year.

Persons who are over 18 years of age, who are physically impaired, and or elderly, and who are in need of room, board and care in a congregate living situation may apply for residency at RSVP.

Among the many services which will be offered to RSVP residents are: personal assistance as needed in dressing, eating, personal shopping, and housekeeping; telephone service with direct connection to the administrative office on a 24-hour basis; three meals daily in the spacious central dining room; physical therapy in the covered swimming pool, as well as therapy in an adjoining facility under a licensed therapist with the direction of the resident's personal physician; and rehabilitation programs geared to develop as much independence as possible on the part of each resident.

Mrs. Castro said that all applicants must be in good general health and able to use an aid such as a cane, walker, crutches or wheelchair.

"It is RSVP's obligation to provide a stimulating and enriching living experience for all residents so that we can somehow bridge the way from the inactive years to a full and dignified life for each individual," she stated.

Application requests should be addressed to Mrs. Elaine Castro, RSVP, Box 525, Carmel Valley (659-2097).

Carmelo is first to enter Youth Fair '74

Carmelo School was the first to respond to the invitation to participate in the 1974 Monterey County Fair to be held July 23-28. Three teachers submitted student projects which will be exhibited in the roofed area of Pattee Arena during the fair. They are Mrs. Zane Spicer, Mrs. John Graham, and the school's teaching-principal, Philip K. Smith.

The educational exhibit will be part of a special "Youth Fair" in Pattee Arena, which will also include exhibits and demonstrations by a number of youth groups and entertainment by talented young people of Monterey County.

Carmelo School's exhibit will include a class report in stories and pictures of a May 3 train trip to Oakland and San Francisco.

Schools and teachers all over the County received reservation forms for the educational exhibit, which should be returned personally or by mail to the fairgrounds office by June 19. The exhibit items will be brought to the fairgrounds on July 19, unless special arrangements are made.

National Horse Show, Aug. 5-10

Premium books for the Monterey National Horse Show, to be held August 5-10 in Pattee Arena at the Monterey County Fairgrounds, have been mailed to previous exhibitors and are available at the fairgrounds office in Monterey (P.O. Box 1151).

Again this year, six full days of horse show events will be offered, and Leslie E. Dixon, fair board president, predicts even more participation than last year, when a record number of entries was reached. The increased stabling, made possible by the horse show's separation from the Monterey County Fair dates, has resulted in a much bigger show than in previous years.

Entries for the 1974 National Horse Show will be accepted until June 29.

Frank Jordano of Santa Barbara, horse show manager, has lined up an impressive list of judges for the six-day event, which is expected to attract record crowds.

Harold Adams of Edmond, Okla., will judge hackney and harness ponies, roadsters, saddle horses, walking horses and saddle seat equitation. Judging the hunters, jumpers and hunter seat equitation will be George H. Morris of Pittstrom, N.J. The third judge will be Clyde Kennedy of Sun Valley, Calif., who will rank the Western, cutting horse and stock seat equitation classes.

Host families needed for exchange students

Host families are currently needed for students from several foreign countries who will be coming to study and live in California for one year. The students will participate in a world-wide exchange program known as International Cultural Exchange, a non-profit organization, which operates under the Bureau of Educational Affairs of the U.S. State Department.

The program places students in average American homes, providing an opportunity for them to attend American high schools, to attain greater proficiency in speaking English, and to acquire a better understanding of our country and customs.

Families interested in becoming hosts for foreign students from Denmark, Brazil, Sweden, Equador, Germany, Venezuela or France should call or write Dick and Lee Bucich, 799 Sinex, Pacific Grove, (373-5691).

THAT CAPTURES THE SPIRIT OF CARMEL·BY·THE·SEA

A fine restaurant, like a fine gem, requires no beating of drums to proclaim its perfection and its worth. The intrinsic excellence of the food and the courteous service of its staff are sufficient to attract the patronage of the most discriminating connoisseur without fanfare. Such an establishment sets a high standard as soon as it opens its doors for business. It then maintains without exception its care in the preparation of dishes, its attentiveness to its guests and the overall attention to making the atmosphere a warm and welcoming one.

There is such a restaurant now in Carmel-By-The-Sea and it is a worthy addition to an area already noted for fine restaurants. It is called The Harbinger and it foretells new pleasures in dining and in conviviality. Boasting a warm and inviting dining room and cocktail lounge, The Harbinger also includes a patio area in the beautiful new courtyard of Carmel Plaza. Here guests may enjoy brunch, lunch and dinner near a cozy fireplace, surrounded by lush flowers and plantings, plus an exciting view of the Plaza's fascinating new fountain.

Adjacent to and connecting with The Harbinger is the intriguing Burlwoods Gallery where guests are invited to browse among its unique displays.

The Harbinger's candlelight dinners reflect, as they should, the beauty and the romance of Carmel-By-The-Sea. Join us at The Harbinger, Carmel's newest and most unusual dining room and cocktail lounge. You'll come back again and again. Dinner reservations recommended.
